Essay by Amy

- 1 My town is a great place to live, but there are a few problems here too. Firstly, there are quite a lot of homeless people in the town centre. Secondly, the air quality in the town is not good. And thirdly, there is a lot of litter on the streets.
- 2 If I were mayor, I would build special hostels so people didn't have to sleep on the streets. To reduce air pollution, I would encourage people to cycle or walk to work by banning people from driving cars in the city centre. To make the streets cleaner, I would provide more rubbish bins in the town centre. I would also make it illegal to drop litter in the street.
- 3 In my opinion, this would make a big difference to life in my town. But if I could only do one thing, I would ban cars from the town centre because air pollution affects everybody's health.

Mobile phones: can we live without them?

Nowadays, it is hard to imagine life without a mobile phone. We rely on them not only for making phone calls, but also for sending messages, taking photos and surfing the Internet.

When they were first developed, mobile phones were large and expensive.

However, as the technology developed, phones became smaller and prices dropped – not only for the phones themselves, but also the cost of calls.

On the one hand, many people think mobile phones have made our lives easier because we can contact people and find out information whenever we like. Moreover, they allow people to call for help if, for example, their car breaks down.

On the other hand, there are concerns that using mobile phones may be harmful to our health.

In conclusion, I believe that mobile phones have had a positive impact on our society.
